

IMAGES TAKEN NOT FOR THEIR IMAGES

NATHAN WITT

I had a strange urge to peel this land of its names and designations and descriptions and dates, Israel, Palestine, Zion, 1897, 1929, 1936, 1948, 1967, 1987, the Jewish State, the Promised Land, the Holy Land, the Land of Splendor, the Zionist Entity, Palestine. Could there be a little piece of earth that is “still free of meaning?”<sup>1</sup>

This project presents a list of image data taken with a cell phone, not for the sake of the images per se, but for their geo-location data. It considers the question of what it means to generate an image not for the sake of representation. The images, essentially holiday snaps, were taken on my first visit to the West Bank in 2012, which I spent walking around Beit Liqya along the Green Line, in Al Attara, Bir Zayt, Wadi Qelt, and Nablus. Gathering what can be considered “anti-images” was my first response to Palestine, and relates to my practice of resisting visual culture. The main objective was to reflect upon each packet of data—embedded in the file of each photograph<sup>2</sup>—and to consider both

  - 2 On what is “embedded” in an image in a military context, Judith Butler in Frames of War refers to “embedded reporting,” where the locations that journalists and photographers report from have to be militarily sanctioned. Much of the book discusses the frame of text and file an image in their own right. Additionally, the list of geo-specific data was a response to the increased number of illegal Israeli settlers geocaching in the West Bank, encouraging other Israelis to travel recreationally into Areas A and B—an act that is punishable under Israeli law—and upload their GPS coordinates.<sup>3</sup> representation, specifically photography, in such contexts of conflict. Judith Butler, Frames of War: When Is Life Grievable? (London: Verso Books, 2009), 64.

- 3 For an introduction to geocaching and examples of settlers geocaching in the West Bank, see www.geocaching.com/geocache/GC4XoD2\_hill-dew. “Hill Dew,” in Area B in the West Bank, is categorized as being in Israel, but to access it the walker will have to change their GPS settings, because the trail is east of the 1967 Green Line. Note the hike being described as “stroller friendly.” With regard to analyzing data (of the image)—and in a military context—a US Department of Defense report entitled Multiformat Discovery and Processing makes an interesting point: it talks about the need to minimize interference with the “platform” by prioritizing analysis over “discovery” and enhancing performance.
