

Contributors

David Brody is a professor of Design Studies at Parsons School of Design at the New School. He is the author of Housekeeping by Design: Hotels and Labor (2016) and Visualizing American Empire: Orientalism and Imperialism in the Philippines (2010). He is also the co-editor (with Hazel Clark) of Design Studies: A Reader.

Line Hjorth Christensen is an associate professor in the Department of Nordic Studies and Linguistics, University of Copenhagen, Denmark, and teaches interdisciplinary Humanities, design history, and museology. Her primary research areas include museology, exhibition media, and the representation of design. She has published numerous articles on these subjects and is the author of the monograph The Poster Movement: A New Front in British Design Between the Wars [Plakatbevægelsen – en britisk designfront i mellemkrigsårene, 2013].

Fred Collopy is a professor of Design and Innovation at Case Western Reserve University's Weatherhead School of Management, where he has been a member of the faculty since completing his PhD in Decision Sciences at the Wharton School of the University of Pennsylvania in 1989. He co-edited the book Managing as Designing (Stanford University Press, 2004). He has designed several large systems including one of the earliest personal data managers, The Desk Organizer (Warner Software), Rule-Based Forecasting (an expert system for selecting among forecasting models), Business Animator (an interactive visual representation of accounting and financial information), and Imager (an instrument for playing abstract graphics as musicians play abstract sounds).

Clive Dilnot was a professor of Design Studies at Parsons School of design (2002–17). He previously taught at Harvard, Chicago, and in Hong Kong and the United Kingdom. Dilnot authored Design & the Question of History (2015); he was editor of John Heskett: A Reader (2016) and John Heskett: Design & The Creation of Value (2017). His current works include authoring Thinking Design: On History, On Acting, On Knowledge, on Configuration; editor, Designing in Dark Times and Radical Thinking in Design.

Brian Dixon is a lecturer and researcher at the Glasgow School of Art. He holds a PhD in Information Design from University of the Arts London, combined with a practice background in visual communications. His research interests draw together information design principles, design pedagogy, and philosophies of practice.

Dennis Doordan is a design educator, critic, museum consultant and co-editor of Design Issues. He has published books and articles on a wide variety of topics dealing with modern and contemporary architecture and design including political design, the impact of new materials and exhibition design. He wrote the chapter "Developing Theories for Sustainable Design" for The Handbook of Design for Sustainability (Bloomsbury, 2013). His most recent publication is "Design Research Today: Challenges and Opportunities" in the August 2018 issue of Archives of Design Research. He is Professor Emeritus of Architecture and Design at the University of Notre Dame.

Jorge Frascara is Professor Emeritus and former Chairman, Art and Design, University of Alberta; Honorary Professor, Emily Carr University; Fellow, Society of Graphic Designers of Canada; Former-President of Ico-D and editorial board member of four leading design journals. He published 12 books and more than 90 articles.

Silvia Gasparotto received her PhD in Design Science from IUAV University of Venice in 2016. Her major fields of study are design processes, design innovation, and product design. Her specific research interests focus on the investigation of the concept of openness within the design discipline. She teaches at the University of the Republic of San Marino and at the University of Bologna giving lectures on product design, design for sustainability, creative processes, design thinking, and design methodology.

Melissa Plourde Khoury is an associate professor at the Lebanese American University. She specializes in teaching design fundamentals, publication design, design history, and visual culture. Her research interest currently focuses on Lebanese visual culture with her most recent writings, "The Egg: Memory and Visual Structures Within Representations of an Iconic Lebanese Ruin," Visual Communication Quarterly (Taylor & Francis, 2017) and "Challenging Panopticism Through Representations: Burj al-Murr," Middle East Journal of Culture and Communication (Brill, 2018).

Iva Kostešić graduated in Art History from Faculty of Humanities and Social Sciences at the University of Zagreb. Since 2014 Kostešić has worked in higher-education institutions in courses related to art history, design theory, history, and methodology, and is currently employed at the School of Design at the Faculty of Architecture, University of Zagreb.

Ramia Mazé is a professor of New Frontiers in Design at Aalto University in Finland, and a co-editor of Design Issues. Previously in Sweden, she worked at Konstfack College of Arts, Crafts and Design, at KTH Royal Institute of Technology, at the national PhD school Designfakulteten, and at the Interactive Institute. A designer and architect by training, her PhD is in interaction design. She has led, published, and exhibited widely through major interdisciplinary and international practice-based design research projects, most recently in the areas of social innovation, sustainable design, and design activism. She specializes in participatory, critical, and politically-engaged design practices.

Chemi Montes-Armenteros is the cover designer of this issue of Design Issues (Volume XXXV, Number 2 Spring 2019). Born in Spain, he arrived in the United States in the 1990s to pursue his MFA at Penn State. He has been teaching and practicing design in the United States since then, and is currently Graphic Design Program Director at American University in Washington DC.

Danné Ojeda is an associate professor at the School of Art, Design and Media, Nanyang Technological University, Singapore. Ojeda's work engages contemporary communication design, art practice and theory. She has worked as a professor of Art History at the Higher Institute for the Arts, in Havana (1996–2000), and as a professor of Graphic Design at the Modern International Art and Design Academy, Chongqing Technology and Business University, China (2006–2008). Ojeda has published and lectured on and curated exhibitions related to contemporary art and design. She is the author of Diagonal. Essays on Contemporary Cuban Art (Jan van Eyck editions: 2003). She contributed two chapters to Nosotros los más infieles. Narraciones críticas sobre el arte cubano, 1993–2005 [We the most infidels. Critical narrations about Cuban art, 1993–2005] (CENDEAC: 2008). She is currently co-editing a book on Asian-Pacific art biennials.

Lilián Sánchez-Moreno is a PhD candidate in the School of Architecture and Design at the University of Brighton. Her PhD explores the discourse of social responsibility within British design research and practice from the late 1970s to present. Before undertaking her doctoral studies, she completed an undergraduate degree in product design at both the Iberoamerican University in Mexico City and at RMIT University in Australia, as well as an MRes in design history and theory at the National Autonomous University of Mexico.

Teal Triggs is a professor of Graphic Design and Associate Dean, School of Communication, Royal College of Art, London, and a co-editor of Design Issues. As a graphic design historian, critic, and educator she has lectured and broadcast widely, and her writings on design pedagogy, self-publishing, and feminism have appeared in numerous edited books and international design publications. She is co-editor with Leslie Atzmon of The Graphic Design Reader (Bloomsbury); author of Fanzines (Thames & Hudson), and the children's book The School of Art (Wide Eyed) which was shortlisted for the ALCS 2016 Educational Writer's Award. Teal is founder-member of the Women's Design + Research Unit (WD+RU) whose remit is to raise awareness of women working in visual communication.

Fedja Vukić is a professor of design theory and history at the School of Design, Faculty of Architecture, University of Zagreb, Croatia. His professional training includes BSc in History and Theory of Visual Arts at the University of Split, Croatia and his PhD thesis in design theory at the University of Ljubljana, Slovenia. As a fellow of The Wolfsonian Foundation Research Centre, Miami Beach 1995, his research was on Italian Advertising in the 20th Century. Vukić publishes reviews, articles, and scholarly papers on visual communications and design in Croatian and international journals. He has published and edited several books on topic including Modernism in Practice (2008), Croatian Design Now (with Victor Margolin, 2009), Design Theory and History: A Critical Anthology (2012), and The Other Design History (2015).